He hasn't even been in the U.S. for a week, but Prince Harry has already had himself a night on the town.

The Prince and 20 of his pals were spotted Friday at Ivy Rooftop, the hip nightspot atop Andaz San Diego.

The group ordered Absolut Vodka, Red Bull and beer, and enjoyed the views of downtown San Diego. By midnight, they moved to the rooftop's pool deck and from a private cabana, watched the rugby match and celebrated until the early hours of the morning.

Prince William's younger brother is stationed at a military base in El Centro, Calif., about 90 minutes from San Diego. He'll be there for two months training in the fine art of live firing from an Apache attack helicopter.

And as is custom for the guys in this intense training program, midway through the course, they all head for a weekend in Vegas.

Party on!
